

Will it be fifth year running for osprey chicks at Foulshaw Moss?

Posted by HuddleHub / 15 - April - 2018

A pair of breeding ospreys has returned to South Lakeland's biggest nature reserve, Foulshaw Moss near Witherslack, giving rise to the hope that chicks will be soon be hatching.

Foulshaw Moss Nature Reserve is open daily to visitors and throughout the breeding season, there will be staff on hand to show visitors the osprey nest, using binoculars and telescopes set up on viewing platforms. The nature reserve is fully accessible, with an all-weather boardwalk which was recently extended to open up previously inaccessible parts of the nature reserve. This season visitors will also benefit from newly-installed information panels, which help to bring the nature reserve to life. The boardwalk extension and information panels were both funded by LEADER.

Foulshaw Moss Nature Reserve is located off the A590 near Witherslack. Full directions are available on <http://www.cumbriawildlifetrust.org.uk/reserves/foulshaw-moss>.

To view the osprey cam online go to www.cumbriawildlifetrust.org.uk/osprey-cam. You can also join in the conversation on social media using #FoulshawOspreys.